Lindsey Answers Marriage Critics

Famous Denver Judge Tells Arkansas Audience What He Believes

LITTLE ROCK.—Denver's famous juvenile court judge, Ben B. Lindsey, who was driven from the bench when he inaugurated an attempted reform of the juvenile court, spoke to a small but interested Arkansas audience Wednesday night in the American Legion stadium here.

Former Judge Lindsey protested in his lecture, which was sponsored by the Little Rock American Legion post, that his companionate marriage proposal had been misrepresented by sensational critics.

"Shorn of the sensational aspects which have been grafted upon it," he said, "companionate marriage means nothing more than legal marriage with legal birth control."

Mr. Lindsey spoke at length on birth control as a recognized factor in modern marriage, declaring that among educated groups the family size is well known to be definitely limited on account of the desire of educated parents to make the family budget provide and education and career for such children as they can afford. He said that in those countries where birth control is recognized, there is a higher marriage rate and a lower divorce rate. Holland, he said, is an example of a nation practicing his so-called companionate marriage, about which such a storm has been raised by his critics in the United States.

He was hopeful on the subject of Arkansas' proposed 90-day divorce law, and advised his audience not to waste too much time worrying over the passage of the bill. Such laws, while not especially useful, sometimes work out in divorce litigation of real value, he said. He characterized the pending bill as one which might afford just relief in some cases and which would have little effect on Arkansas residents, as it does not change the existing cause for divorce. Mr. Lindsey conferred Wednesday afternoon with James R. Campbell, Sevier county representative who sponsored the new divorce bill in the last legislature.

Constant opposition has followed Mr. Lindsey for the past 30 years, in his efforts to institute reforms of various sorts. He fought his early battles over the establishment of a juvenile court, freed from the mechanics of the law, and for the passage of state laws for child betterment. In later years he has championed a cause of modern marriage and has been variously accused, he said, of sponsoring free love and trial marriage and fostering divorce. On the contrary, he says the companionate marriage generally develops into a family marriage and in cases where divorce is contemplated, a frank discussion of the problem often has been able to bring about a reconciliation.

He quoted from the report of the Federal Council of Churches, given in Current History for April 1931 which endorses the theory of companionate marriage and which is, he said, the greatest single victory for marriage in 2000 years.

Mr. Lindsey was most earnest in his belief in the efficiency of companionate marriage and seemed not at all disturbed by attacks upon his social program. He is thoroughly imbued with the justice of the cause which he champions and seems most determined toward those who do not agree with him.

The bid was submitted by the National Securities company of Little Rock, and affiliated investment houses and banks.

Details of the bid were not disclosed by the board.

80-Year-Old Tree Still Bearing Fruit

Yield of 3 Bushels Each Year Is Produced by Old Veteran

LAKE VILLAGE—A pear tree in the yard of H. C. Benjamin, four miles from Lake Village, is said to have been bearing since pre-Civil war days. More than 80 years is the age claimed for it.

Dr. Stephen Proctor, who owned the land where the tree stands, planted it about 1850. It was one of several of fruit and nut-bearing trees set out by the doctor around his new home. Several years after the war, Dr. Proctor sold the land and moved to Hot Springs.

The land bordering on Lake Chicot is the property of H. C. Benjamin, who has turned it into a summer camp for vacationists. The tree's average yield per season is about three bushels. The pears are of the Le Conte variety, and many of them weigh as much as a pound.

These are facts that you should think over in dead earnest.

The situation must be met. I feel there is too little praying over the matter. I am sure that if our people would take this whole matter to God in earnest prayer, and then do what the Holy Spirit impresses them to do that in a few days the deficit would be removed, and hearts that are now heavy would rejoice.

Grassy Spots Particularly Attractive to Army and Cut Worms

Army worms have appeared in a number of counties in eastern Arkansas, causing serious damage locally. Although they attack practically all field and garden crops, outbreaks usually have their origin in grassland or uncultivated areas adjoining cultivated fields, states Dwight Isely, University of Arkansas College of Agriculture.

Grassy spots are particularly attractive to moths of army worms and cutworms, as places for laying eggs. In the early stages these caterpillars feed in the grassland and are likely to be unnoticed. When nearly grown, they migrate in armies and it is then that serious damage follows. At this time stands of corn or cotton may be destroyed in a few days.

When the army worms are moving to cultivated crops, they are very difficult to control. The problem is much easier if early infestations in grass can be located and the worms destroyed there. If worms are still small, they can be destroyed by heavy dust applications of arsenicals, such as Paris green mixed with lime, arsenate of lead, or calcium arsenate.

The larger caterpillars are harder to kill by the small amount of dust which collects in foliage, and for this reason the use of a poisoned bait may be advisable. The following formula has been usually recommended for cutworms and may be used under such circumstances: bran, 25 pounds; Paris green, 1 pound; molasses, half gallon; and water, 2 to 3 gallons.

Mix the Paris green with the bran. Mix the molasses with the water. Add the water and molasses solution to the mixture of bran and poison, stirring slowly while mixing. The bait should be scattered in the path where the worms are marching.

This bait is poisonous to man and animals, and should be kept away from children and farm animals.

At times when army worm infestations are very severe and moving from one field to another, it is advisable to make a dust barrier to prevent their march. In doing this, a deep ditch is thrown up with a plow, and a log dragged back and forth in the ditch. Worms which get in the ditch have little chance to get out quickly if the dust is finely pulverized, and before they do so can be crushed with the log. Such barriers require constant attention for several days, but are recommended when infestations are quite severe.

Racing Bill Stirs Miami Optimism

$1,000,000 to Be Spent on Hialeah Park and Race Track

MIAMI, Fla.—(P)—Not since the real estate boom collapsed has there been so much optimism in Miami.

When the state legislature overrode the veto of Governor Doyle E. Carlton, thereby legalizing dog and horse racing and the pari-mutuel system of wagering, an impromptu celebration broke forth.

Parades formed in the downtown section and terminated in a mass meeting in Bayfront park, where speeches were made amid noisemaking race fans.

Martin Whelan, city judge of the township in which is located the Miami Racing association's Hialeah Park plant, said many persons now are paying taxes on property in the community who had not bothered to do so for several years. He predicted a general revival of real estate values as a result of legalized racing.

Frank J. Bruen, manager-director of the plant already has announced improvements costing $1,000,000 will be made. Hialeah, he said, will be made the most beautiful track in the country.

Similar statements were made by Joseph Fidenor in New York, chairman of the Miami Jockey Club board, and Major Barclay Wainwright, president of the racing association.

Other investments may be made in dog and horse racing plants in Miami, St. Petersburg, Tampa, Jacksonville and other places, but race promoters outside of Miami are not so sanguine.

Under the new law race meetings must be approved at a county referendum, and already opponents are preparing to wage vigorous campaigns at the polls where requests for racing licenses are contemplated.

Dr. E. O. Heath, Methodist pastor at Jacksonville, has issued a statement saying "I speak for my church and I know that I speak for all Methodist churches in the state when I say that we never will permit this terrible wrong to steal unobserved into statutes of our country."

Dr. Heath said mass meetings and committees will be organized to fight racing and predicted that Dade county (Miami) will be the lone exception if "there is a break in the ranks."

A fight over racing legislation has raged in Florida since 1913. Racing has been conducted, but with an uneasy companion of suits and injunctions. Various methods of watering down oral betting to selling of stock certificates, have been employed to dodge state gambling laws.

Under the new law, track owners pay a tax on contributions to the pari-mutuel pools and on admissions. Dog racing is permitted 90 days and horse racing 45 days between December 1 and April 1.

86,000 MILES Here's an endurance record that speaks for RIVERSIDE Quality. The tire shown above was sent us by Mr. J. H. Ralston of Delano, California, as an expression of his satisfaction with RIVERSIDE service. Over all kinds of roads, and in all kinds of weather, this sturdy RIVERSIDE clicked off mileage. Twenty thousand, fifty thousand, even five thousand miles—and still going strong! And at last, after his RIVERSIDE Cord had covered better than 86,000 miles, Mr. Ralston sent it back to Ward's as an example of RIVERSIDE endurance.

WARD'S RIVERSIDES are Turning in Amazing Mileage Records All Over America! . . . 42,000, 68,000, 86,000 MILES!

AFTER all, you buy a tire for just one thing—and that's MILEAGE. And you do get MILEAGE when you buy a Riverside. Note the tire above that covered 86,000 miles. And Mr. C. A. Puariea of Portland, Ore., writes us about four Riversides that have covered 42,000 miles and are still in use. Mr. R. H. Easter of Elma, Washington, reports a Riverside in use every day on a school bus covered 68,000 miles. These three examples are but typical of the scores of letters and reports we are constantly receiving on Riverside performance. These three testimonials came to us unsolicited—they were not bought at a price!

No wonder jealous tire makers and dealers are becoming alarmed over the tremendous swing of tire buyers to Riversides. The most unfair and bitter tactics ever known in the tire industry are being used today to fight Ward's Riversides. Advertising has appeared all over the country in which mail order tires are referred to as "mongrels." Unfair comparison charts are being published and displayed by competitors. Second line tires are being offered under nationally known tire names at the same prices as first quality Riversides—BUT THEY CAN'T BEAT RIVERSIDE PERFORMANCE, AND THAT'S WHAT COUNTS, and that's what the customer wants.

We'll Match Riversides . . . on the Road . . . Against ANY Tire Made and We'll Beat it in Price!

Riverside tires are one of the best known in America. They have been sold for 19 years. They are made by one of the largest tire companies in the world. They are built to the most rigid specifications known. They are the finest quality it is possible to produce. They are backed by a guarantee that is without limit as to time or mileage. AND THEY SELL FOR LESS THAN ANY FIRST QUALITY NATIONALLY ADVERTISED TIRE ON THE MARKET! These sound like sensational claims. But they're FACTS. Montgomery Ward & Co., one of the largest merchandising institutions in the world, now in its 59th year in business, stands back of every claim made in its advertisements. Note this—the nationally advertised tires offered you at the same prices as Riversides are NOT the first quality tires of the manufacturers who make them—but their second quality tires—put on the market to meet Riverside prices. So, always compare qualities as well as prices. The table at the right lists some of the best known first quality tires that DO compare with Riversides in quality—YOU COMPARE THE PRICES!

Here are some leading makes of tires that are similar in quality to our 4-ply Riversides, and the published list prices:

Here are some leading makes of tires that are similar in quality to our 6-ply Riversides, and the published list prices:

A Message of Peace

Were half the power that fills the world with terror,
Were half the wealth bestowed on camps and courts,
Given to redeem the human mind from error
There were no need of arsenals or forts!
Down the dark future, thru long generations.

The echoing sounds grow fainter and then cease.
And like a bell, with solemn, sweet vibrations,
We hear once more the voice of Him say, "Peace!"
Peace and no longer from its brazen portals
The blast of war's great organ would shake the skies.
But beautiful as songs of the immortals,
The holy melodies of love would rise!

Forest Fires Show Decline During '31

Improved Weather and Better Co-Operation Said to Be Cause

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—With only 173 fires recorded so far, compared with 408 by May 31 last year, national forests in Arkansas have been relatively free from fire this year, H. O. Stabler, assistant regional forester, said after an inspection trip for the United States forest service.

The area of national forest land burned in Arkansas this far, Mr. Stabler said, was 1,572 acres while the loss a year ago was 12,103 acres.

Improved weather conditions and better co-operation by residents have prevailed in both the Ouachita and Ozark national forest areas to prevent fires, Mr. Stabler said.

"The building of forest development roads and trails in the national forests is responsible for some of the growth of co-operation and good will

"Sincerely Yours" —

Maybe it was his life story that "Half Pint" was trying to tell when he posed thus with a typewriter. For a lot of experiences have been crowded into his brief span. A homeless vagrant, he was accused recently of biting a little girl, and after being sentenced to ten days in the Washington, D. C., pound he faced execution unless someone appeared with a $2 reprieve. But scores of capital citizens sensing that justice had gone astray, learned that "Half Pint's" baby teeth had rendered him incapable of biting anybody. E. C. Reid won the race to bail him out and provide a home, and here you see the puppy in his master's office.

in Arkansas," Mr. Stabler said. "The building program has given employment to many local people and has fostered a pride in the value and beauty of the Arkansas forests."

To provide opportunity for work for as many men as possible, the forest service has "staggered" the shifts, dividing the employees into two groups and using them in alternating two-week periods. Heads of families had preference in employment for road work.

Although Arkansas has passed an enabling act to co-operate with the forest service in forest fire protection no state funds have yet been made available. The Arkansas College of Agriculture, however, has held hundreds of demonstrations in forest fire protection in the last year, involving practice on 81,000 acres of land, according to Extension Forester Charles A. Gillette, who says Arkansas farmers are rapidly learning how the forests play an important part in a well developed agricultural program.

States and the Deficit

THE threat of a huge deficit in the federal treasury has done more than call the public's attention to the decline in federal income due to the business depression. It has strikingly emphasized the tremendous increase in the cost of government that has taken place during the past decade or two.

In 1911, just 20 years ago, the federal government spent little less than $700,000,000. In the fiscal year now ending the government has spent almost $4,500,000,000. Even when allowance is made for the cost of the World war, the increase is still astounding.

One item that bulks large in this increase is the practice of spending money from the federal treasury on state projects. Uncle Sam, for instance, matches the states dollar for dollar in many highway building programs. He contributes lavishly to the national guard organizations.

All told, he now contributes around $150,000,000 a year to state activities. Two decades ago such contributions came to only $8,000,000. Many thinly-populated states receive far more than they pay back into it in the form of taxes.

Yet this by no means means that federal expenditures on state projects should be abandoned. The system is not as out of balance as it looks.

The New York taxpayer may object when the government spends a million dollars on roads in Wyoming, for example, but when he takes a motor trip through the west he will drive over those roads and rejoice that they are so good.

The Pennsylvanian may object to federal expenditures on the national guard of Arizona; yet, if war came, the Arizona national guard would take its place in the first line of defense and help defend the Pennsylvanian from the common enemy.

State lines, in other words, are not water-tight boundaries. We do not live in isolation.

Furthermore, our conception of government is changing.
 Uncle Sam spends more than he used to because he has found so many more things that need to be done. The states may, as some critics protest, be "raiding the federal treasury"; nevertheless, it would be very hard to find a place where the federal expenditures on state projects could properly be cut down very appreciably.

Necessity Or Luxury?

IF THE problems of charity are a little bit harder to understand now than they used to be, blame the automobile.

Having changed most other phases of our civilization,
 the auto has also done things to the old allied issues of poverty, crime and relief work.

In Cleveland the other day a man was arrested while siphoning gasoline from the tank of a parked car into the tank of his own machine.

It developed that he was a hitherto law-abiding citizen;
 an honest and industrious workman, who had been out of a job for a year or more and who was resorting to theft simply because he had no money to buy gasoline of his own.

Here is a new twist to an old problem. The honest workingman who is driven to crime by poverty, and steals a sack of groceries, or snatches a purse in order to keep his family from starving, is a stock figure of every business depression.
 Usually he gets lenient treatment, quite properly. But how about this new case? Is there a parallel? Is a starving auto on the same plane with a starving family?

Somewhat similar are the reports of welfare workers, who point out that families that have reached destitution
 through unemployment usually hang on to their automobiles like grim death, squeezing out nickles and dimes for gasoline
 when the larder is actually empty. Most welfare organizations have made it a rule not to extend help to families that have not sold their cars.

At first blush one is inclined to be sharply critical of people who persist in sticking to their automobile when the cupboard is bare. But there is, after all, something to be said for them.

We live in an automobile age. For the majority of Americans the auto has ceased to be a luxury and has become a necessity. Thousands upon thousands of urban workers live far out in the suburbs, beyond the reach of the car lines, and cannot get to and from their city without their auto—unless,
 of course, they walk three or four miles each way.

Furthermore, for a steadily increasing percentage of the population, the automobile has become almost the only form of relaxation. Except for their afternoon and evening drives aimless, pleasant and healthful—many Americans get almost no recreation at all.

Are such people to be blamed for wanting to keep their autos?

In other words, we have made a civilization in which the automobile is the keystone of the arch. Should we get too indignant when those who, through no fault of their own, are plunged in poverty persisting in trying to maintain the family car?

WASHINGTON—If anyone doesn't realize now that less meat should be eaten during the summer months it isn't the fault of the meat packers and the livestock interests.

The more umbrage you take at anything the more publicity you give it and the bulletin of the United States Public Health Service warning against eating too much meat in hot weather would have attracted no more attention than other U. S. P. H. S. bulletins if the meat men had been willing to let well enough alone.

Instead, they protested vigorously to Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, in whose department the health service is, and got themselves and the meat-eating issue into the newspapers. When Mellon decided to censor federal health bulletins in the future that news and the row about censorship which it stirred up presumably left few people unaware of what the U. S. P. H. S. had been advising.

POLITICIANS can tell you that it often doesn't pay to take umbrage. When Premier Mussolini went after General Smedley Butler
 for calling him a hit-and-run driver
 the charge didn't stick, but Mussolini found himself being panned on general principles all over the United States while Butler became a sort of national hero. Senator Nye of North Dakota, finding that Moses of New Hampshire had introduced his expenses as chairman of the campaign funds committee
 into the Congressional Record, heatedly charged a political plot
 and so directed attention to his accounts. The accounts undoubtedly were fair, but some of the items looked funny on the face of them.

and lots of people had a good laugh
 at Nye.

As one who has sometimes reported the presence of numerous speakeasies and gambling joints more or less "in the shadow of the White House," your correspondent now announces that it is virtually impossible to buy a drink or play
 a bet in the First police precinct
 as a result of continued police raids. That hasn't been true for several years heretofore and appears to demonstrate that the coppers, if they try, can keep the town comparatively free of speakeasies and gambling joints. The successful methods employed have been,
 principally, the removal of barricaded doors from such places, and arrests of gamblers as "vagrants."
 The First precinct, where the drive has centered, takes in the downtown business district and part of the White House grounds. . . . The local liquor traffic is now in the hands of men and women who accept telephone orders for delivery.
 These violators have proved hard to eliminate.

NEARLY everyone would like to know what comment, if any,
 President Hoover made to Congressman Dyer of Missouri anent
 the latter's proposal for legalized four per cent beer so as to raise a billion dollars in taxes and employ 100,000 persons. But there is a strict rule that if the president ever says anything to you, you must tell anyone what he said.
 The most conspicuous violator of the rule was Andy Pinchot, who, seven months afterward, wrote an article, about how Mr. Hoover, about a year ago, had told a visiting delegation that unemployment was shamefully exaggerated, that business was on the upgrade and that the committee had come "six weeks too late."

Navy's Victory In Intercollegiate Race on Hudson

Out of a season of disappointment and defeat, Navy recovered its rowing prowess in the annual intercollegiate four-mile race at Poughkeepsie, N. Fictured above is the finish of the spectacular battle, with the eight midshipmen and the coxswain flashing over the line to win by little more than a length from Cornell's defending champions. When $7,000,000 Liner Burned and Sank

The $7,000,000 liner Bermuda was going up in smoke when the above picture was taken at the Hamilton, Bermuda, docks the other day. Listing badly, and with fuel tanks flooded to prevent an explosion that would have imperiled hundreds, the craft soon settled to the bottom. British naval forces, as well as all fire-fighting apparatus of the city, were unable to prevent destruction of the Bermuda's super-structure and extensive damage to three lower decks.

Consider your Adam's Apple!!* Don't Rasp Your Throat With Harsh Irritants

"Reach for a LUCKY instead"

Touch your Adam's Apple with your finger. You are actually touching your larynx—this is your voice box—it contains your vocal cords. When you consider your Adam's Apple, you are considering your throat—your vocal chords. When a lawyer makes a statement before a jury he backs it up with evidence and facts. Here are the facts. Certain harsh irritants, present in all raw tobaccos—which are expelled by LUCKY STRIKE's exclusive "TOASTING" Process—are sold by us to manufacturers of chemical compounds. In other words, the removal of these irritants in the manufacture of LUCKY STRIKE is not a mere laboratory procedure for the purpose of getting an advertising phrase—it is a definite and vitally important process in rendering LUCKY STRIKE Cigarettes less irritating than other cigarettes. Remember—LUCKY STRIKE comes to you after certain harsh irritants present in all raw tobaccos have been expelled through the exclusive "TOASTING" Process. No wonder LUCKIES are always kind to your throat. Be careful in your choice of cigarettes.

Heart of Liane

by MABEL McELLIOTT
©1931 by NEA
SERVICE INC.

HEIN HERE TODAY
LIANE HARRITT is a beautiful girl, just out of the convent. Her mother, Mrs. HARRITT, a former actress, mourns her inability to give the girl the education she desires. Liane has a position in a New York department store. On one of the hottest days of early summer, when the heat is in its full force, Liane is staying in about to leave her room to go to a summer stock company at Willow Stream, Long Island. MISS MINNIE, Liane's maid, is asked to go with her. The offer is made by Mrs. C. J. BROWN, a friend of Liane's mother, who is visiting at the Willow Stream hotel.

"The knocker was heavy, old and rusted."

WILLOW STREAM was a sleepy seaside village of narrow, elm shaded streets slipping off into a countryside of surprising loveliness. The taxi which carried Cass and Liane up from the station on that hot little day rattled through lanes smelling of honeysuckle. Peonies bloomed in the dooryards and there were great clumps of purple iris everywhere.

The cab drew up at 20 Dogwood Lane. Here was a low, white house banked in barberry and evergreen. The knocker was heavy, old and rusted. Everything about the place looked slightly run-down. The porch sagged and the shutters needed paint. But to Cass and Liane with eyes accustomed to the brick and mortar of the smoldering city the place had an air of ease and even beauty.

Mrs. Smithers answered the clanging of their knock and showed them to their rooms. Cass said, looking about the low-ceilinged third story apartment, "I wonder if this won't be terribly hot." Mrs. Smithers assured them it was amazingly cool under the roof. The two had to take her word for it.

They left their bags and started to walk to the theater. The playhouse was located on a corner of the Cleeppaugh estate on the shore. There would be no trouble, said Mrs. Smithers, in finding it as orange-painted arrows marked the way all along the road. "The Willow Stream Playhouse, one mile."

THROUGH the trees ahead they could glimpse that graystone pile which was the Cleeppaugh mansion. It was done quite in the English manner with ivy clambering over the walls, with mullioned windows and velvet terraces descending to a dream of a garden.

"There's a place," sighed Liane, "you wouldn't be ashamed to take the boy friend!"

Cass laughed, then looked shocked. "Where do you pick up such dreadful talk?" she wanted to know. Liane said, "Elsie always jokes about boy friends. It isn't considered vulgar any more. Mother, it's whimsical. Elsie says all our best people use the phrase."

Cass sniffed. Obviously she had her own opinions about "our best people."

The road led away now from the house and in a little glade beyond they could see the red tiled roof of the playhouse. A little group had already assembled. Cass could see Elsie, very animated, wearing a pink sports dress and engaging a young man in conversation. Vernon Wells was superintending the unloading of a van.

Elsie's greeting was reassuring. "Hello, kid, how're things?" Yes, Elsie was nice and friendly. Liane's heart warmed to her. True, she was rather snooty at times, liked to ask personal questions, and liked to pry. But Liane felt that her simple friendliness made up for all that.

"We don't begin until Thursday night," Elsie volunteered. "The old man" (she made a disparaging face at Vernon's back) "is having fits because the velvet curtains arrived two inches too long. The decorators have to dash out tomorrow and take a tack in them. And the lighting system has gone gloomy out here in the wilds." Elsie seemed pleased, on the whole, at this delay.

Liane went around to the front of the small theater and peered in. Electricians were making a great to do, hawling back and forth at each other. Carpenters were hammering. A tall, fair, young man in flannels was supervising work on the stage. He gave Liane one fleeting, curious glance.

"Cutie, isn't it?" Elsie inquired. "Old Lady Cleeppaugh is supposed to be our angel but I suspect she's not paying for the whole business or Vernon wouldn't be so upset. I think he has a stake in it himself. Cleeppaugh just supplies the house and lot, not the trimmings, I think."

AS the two girls watched the young man in white abandoned his labors and approached. "You know Miss Harritt, don't you, Elsie?" Elsie said. It was her customary form of introduction. She knew Liane had never set eyes on the youth before. "Clive is instructing the decorators' men," Elsie explained to Liane, "and having a most horrible time of it."

Just then one of the electricians bawled, "Mr. Cleeppaugh!" loudly and raucously, and the fair young man exclaimed himself. Liane regarded his receding back with something like awe. "Is that who he is?" she murmured.

Elsie laughed, showing her lovely white teeth. "The one and only," she trilled. "Mama's boy and Papa's heir. Didn't take me long, did it?"

Elsie was beautiful in a lush and bovine way. She was faultlessly and naturally blond. She had a figure in the old-fashioned sense of the word and she moved as if she were always conscious that she presented a graceful picture.

"I'm not at all sure Mama likes it, either," Elsie continued, preening herself. "Mama thinks the actress from the city may turn out to be a bold, bad hussy."

"Oh, she couldn't think that about you!" Liane put in, quite shocked.

"Couldn't she, though?" Elsie giggled, vastly amused at Liane's championship.

Then she went on, "You're at Smithers, aren't you? So am I. The Old Man is up at the Inn and most of the others are scattered around nearby. Old Smithers serves up fairly tasty meals. It's not a bad place really." She squeezed Liane's arm companionably. "This thing may turn out to be really fun, d'you know it?" Elsie said.

Liane said shyly that she hoped so. Already she felt elated. The bright day, the women about in their gay summer dresses, the vast spread of woods and water all induced a holiday mood. She forgot the fright and depression of a past week.

"Relax at four," called Vernon Wells suddenly in the midst of her reverie.

"We'll go back to Smithers for lunch," Elsie said. "Too bad Clive's tied up with those workmen. We might have got a lift from him."

They waved to the others and started down the road. Blade Herbert, Frank Morton and two or three other women brought up the rear with Cass. Elsie trotted ahead with Liane. She said she had "so much to tell" her. Liane felt flattered, and wondered if she should confide to Elsie the story of her adventure the week before. She decided against it.

THEY had not realized they were walking so swiftly. When they reached the main road they were far ahead of the others. Liane was intent on some confidence of Elsie's and did not see the scarlet roadster nor hear its klaxon horn. Another girl caught her arm, dragging her back.

"These speeders!" Elsie bawled, seeing Liane so white and shaken. Liane had blanched not because of danger but because she had seen the face of the man wheeling past in the red car.

It was Shane McDermid, the muffled Shane McDermid—the policeman who had allowed her to escape from that horrible scene the week before.

As Liane had guessed, the red car lay waiting in the Smithers' weed-grown drive. The girl ran forward.

"What is it?" she called out. "What's happened? Are you looking for me?"

Then she noticed, subconsciously, how big and brown he was. In the least like a policeman. Indeed, he looked like some jovial young broker on a holiday.

Keen blue eyes under crazy brows surveyed her. Then McDermid said awkwardly, "Just thought you'd like to know that you're getting along O. K. Be out in a week, the Doc says. You seemed so upset—so worried."

He stammered. "It's my day on," McDermid went on. "I was riding this way, anyhow."

LIANE reached impulsively for that big hand. "Oh, how kind, how awfully kind," she breathed. "I can never thank you." Her gratitude had the extravagance of a young girl's mobile feeling.

meant what she said. She had lay awake the night before, trembling and wondering what would happen. It Bunny Wertheimer should do. Now Shane McDermid continued blusteringly. "It was nothing at all. I felt kinda responsible, on account of Molly."

"But I'm grateful, all the same," she insisted.

The man stepped into the back seat, shifted gears. He could see the other women trailing up the road. "See you in church," he grinned as the car moved away.

Elsie came running. "Who's that?" she wanted to know. Liane had become a veritable didn't-prattle, little girl fashion, as she might have a few weeks before. "A friend, with a message," she told Elsie. "Good news for me and Mother." She smiled, scratching out her arms to the wide world.

Elsie surveyed her. "And I'm hungry," she said dryly. "Cap out of your trunk, kid, and come to lunch."

Attempts to Show Trust Violations by Caldwell

NASHVILLE, Tenn.—(AP)—Defense attorneys in the trial of Rogers Caldwell, investment banker, Tuesday continued their efforts to show alleged trust violations in his financial houses were unknown to him.

With E. A. Goodloe, cashier of the defendant's Bank of Tennessee, being cross examined, the defense asked question after question designed to show J. D. Carter, a vice president, had charge of the trust department and Caldwell left its supervision entirely to Carter.

Carter, characterized by the state as its "star" witness, was expected to take the stand later Tuesday.
